Emporis

In Germany, building-related data provider Emporis has appointed Brian Tonry as Chief Marketing Officer, in charge of marketing and product development.

In his new role, he will also provide senior-level support to the sales division on strategic partner and business development activities.

Since 2000, Tonry has worked at McGraw-Hill Construction, where he was most recently VP with overall responsibility for the firm's analytics and custom market research sales, and international business development. He joined the firm as Director of Business Development, and then served as VP of Product Marketing. Before to this, he worked for publishing house Dow Jones.

CEO Stephan Boehm commented: 'Brian's excellent reputation, his know-how, and above all his experience in creating and maintaining long-term strategic partnerships, will help us to leverage Emporis' business potential on an even greater scale.'

Headquartered in Frankfurt, Emporis provides research, ratings and analysis of building data for customers from the building industry and other sectors.
