Facts

- This building is an addition to Annex One, the 1948-1949 landmark International Style building that originally housed classrooms for the University of Denver before being occupied by municipal offices.
- The architects won 2003 Merit Awards presented by both the Denver and Colorado chapters of the American Institute of Architects.
- Annex One was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1990 after standing only 41 years. It was fully renovated with construction of the new Wellington Webb Municipal Building.
- The building is named for Wellington Webb, the first African-American mayor of Denver, who was elected to his first of three terms in 1991.
