Facts

- All original building materials were gathered within a 40 mile radius of the site.
- There were plans from the beginning to develop a second "twin" tower just to the west of the first building. Economic conditions and owner circumstances prevented this from happening.
- This building was originally an office tower but was converted to assisted living residential suites and apartments in 1999. Both the interior and exterior were completely renovated at a cost of $12 million.
- During reconstruction, in order to capitalize on the smaller mechanical systems, an intermediate residential floor was built by splitting the 20-foot high mechanical room into two 10-foot high floors.
- Original plans had envisioned a penthouse dining establishment. This idea was dropped shortly before completion due to the newly opened revolving restaurant at the Chateau Lacombe Hotel.
