Facts

- Opened as Washington Plaza Hotel June 29, 1969.
- Seattle's grandest theater, the Orpheum, sat on the corner of Stewart and Westlake from 1927 to the 1960s. It was razed to build the Washington Plaza Hotel.
- To speed construction, the steel was fabricated into 3-story high column trees.
- The structure is unusual in that there are no radial beams in the two outside of three concentric steel rings; rather, they are tied together by the 6-inch concrete slabs that form the floors.
- This original tower is exactly 96 feet in diameter.
