Features & Amenities

- National landmark

Facts

- The Missouri Pacific Building was originally intended to reach 35 floors, but construction was stopped at the 23rd floor because of the Great Depression.
- It was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2002.
- Home to offices of the Missouri Pacific and then Union Pacific Railroads for decades, this building became a prime redevelopment candidate after the jobs at this site were moved to the new Union Pacific Center in Omaha in 2004.
