Facts

- The 18-story 5th & Main is the tallest building in the city and the tallest between Indianapolis, Nashville, St. Louis, and Louisville.
- It was built as the new headquarters for Old National Bank and replaced the Hotel Lincoln and an earlier headquarters of Old National Bank, the Old National Bank Building, also at 420 Main Street.
- The ceremonial groundbreaking took place on December 15, 1967. Foundation work started in early 1968.
- A topping out ceremony was held on May 24, 1969.
- The facade is characterized by dark-tinted glass contrasting with delicate, light-colored mullions, and a cornice-like loggia surrounding the top story.
- In 2004, the bank moved its headquarters to the new Old National Place, located directly on the Ohio River riverfront.
- Plans were announced in 2019 to redevelop the property into a mixed-use tower that would include restaurant, retail, office, and residential.
- As part of the renovation, the building will receive an entirely new facade. The lower parking levels will be given a lighter screen treatment while the upper levels will get a new glass curtain wall.
