Features & Amenities

- One of the city's famous buildings

Facts

- This building is the seat of the Danish Parliament.
- The castle was razed to the ground in 1370 after King Valdemar Atterdag lost a war against the Hansa cities.
- In 1794 the palace and church burned down, but the riding ground and the theatre were saved and are visible today.
- In 1884 the palace burned down again and only the church, theatre and riding ground survived.
- The ruins from the old castle of 1370 can still be seen today below the current castle.
- Construction of the third and current palace started in 1907 after many years of political and artistic disputes about the rebuild.
- The famous Blåtårn (Blue Tower) was a part of Copenhagen Palace and was where the daughter of King Christian IV was incarcerated for twenty-two years.
- In 1848 King Frederik VII gave up his power and Denmark got its first constitution and hereby created the Danish parliament, which took seat in the palace.
- The castle was built as protection against the Wendish Vikings who came from northern Germany.
- Copenhagen Palace was built on the site of Absalon's castle.
- Copenhagen Palace was demolished in 1736 to make space for the first Christiansborg, a luxurious four-winged Rococo palace with church, riding ground and theatre.

- Construction of the new Christiansborg commenced in 1806 and finished in 1828.
- Copenhagen Palace was occupied by Danish Kings; hence Copenhagen became Denmark's capital city.
- The first castle was built here by Absalon around the year 1160.
- After 34 years of being sited at the engineering barracks in Fredericiagade, the Members of Parliament again moved to Christiansborg Palace.
